What is RAIM?

The Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist Movement (RAIM) is a collection of revolutionary organizers, activists, artists, and technical workers based in the United States and Canada.

RAIM upholds the revolutionary tradition born of people's struggles against capitalist-imperialism. However, we differ from many self-professed revolutionary organizations in our analysis of global class relations. We understand that the primary divide between the peoples of the world is that between the First World and the Third World, and we acknowledge the role that imperialism plays in this relationship. Under capitalist-imperialism, wealth in the form of resources and labor is transferred to the First World from the Third World through brutal exploitation, enforced by raw military aggression. Within this system, the average First World worker receives much more in terms of material wealth than the average Third World worker. Because of their privileged position within the capitalist-imperialist system, most First World workers today support imperialism as they have a material interest in maintaining their privileged status as members of an exploiter class.

Revolution will come to the US and Canada as part of a general process of global defeat for US-led imperialism. RAIM exists to help develop the revolutionary forces necessary for the eventual seizure of power away from US-led imperialism as part of a world-wide upsurge of revolutionary people's struggles. RAIM seeks revolutionary class traitors in the First World who are willing to act against their own privilege to create an egalitarian and sustainable world for all.
